

GIVE ASSESSMENT FIGURES FOR FALLS TOWNSHIP HOUSES

Figures Range from $2300 to $2500 for Two-Bedroom Houses

PLAN 1100 MORE UNITS

Assessment Figures Do Not Take in Houses Already Constructed

John W. Dyer, chief of the Bucks County Board of Assessment, has announced tentative assessment figures for some 1100 additional homes to be built by the Danherst Corporation at Fairless in Falls Township.

Figures ranging from $2,300 to $2,500 for two-bedroom and larger homes were based on estimates handed down by Falls Township Tax Assessor Sigmund Glocker.

George Galbreath, general superintendent of the project, said he was planning the construction of 100 32-foot, two-bedroom homes; 950 40-foot, three-bedroom homes; and 50 48-foot, larger-type homes. All are slated for completion before the end of the year, he said.

Dyer pointed out that these assessment figures would not take in houses already built and now in use in the project.

"The 1952 tax rate in Falls Township has not been set," he said. "The 1951 real estate tax calls for a six-mill road tax, a six-mill county tax and a 35-mill school tax."

This would mean a $47,000 tax levied on every million-dollar assessment, it was pointed out.

MISS KILLEY UNDER TREATMENT

NEWTOWN, Aug. 23—Miss Edith Killey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Killey, was moved by ambulance to Jefferson Hospital, Philadelphia, on Sunday, for a two months' treatment for multiple sclerosis. Many of the organizations of Newtown, Langhorne and vicinity have been working for this cause—that Miss Killey might have this series of treatments in an effort to improve her health. She is a former member of the faculty of the Langhorne school, but has been invalided for some years.

Four From This Area Take Recruit Training

Four seaman recruits from this area, Karl J. Elenko of 262 Hayes street; Paul Melvin, 2111 Wilson avenue; William M. Lake, of 211 Wood street; and David L. Scott, Emilie ave., Bristol R. D., are undergoing recruit training at the U. S. Naval Training Center, Bainbridge, Md.

This initial training includes instruction in such fields as seamanship, fire-fighting, gunnery, signaling, and other courses designed to make the recruit well-versed in every phase of Navy life. Upon completion of their 11-week training period at the recently reactivated training center, graduates are assigned to duty stations with the Fleet or at Navy shore stations, or are sent to service schools for advanced technical training.

SPACE PLATFORM WOULD AID ROCKETS

Artificial, Man-Made Satellite Circling the Earth Forever

VIEW INTO FUTURE

The first objective of man's rocket flight across "the last frontier" into space will be a space platform—an artificial, man-made satellite circling the earth forever.

One of the world's foremost rocket scientists, Dr. Wernher von Braun, asserts in a forthcoming book on "Space Medicine" that such a platform could serve, for example, as a worldwide weather station—or an atom-bomb carrier. And that may depend on who builds the first such station. The following article, second of a series presents Dr. von Braun's conception of a space platform and graphically describes some of its uses.

PEACE TALKS

UN BASE NEAR KAESONG—Red China's radio said tonight the Communist breakoff of the Korea truce talks was meant to apply only to today's subcommittee session, and an Allied official predicted resumption of the conference in three or four days. The stalemate parley was suddenly suspended by the Reds with a charge that Allied aircraft had attacked Kaesong—an allegation promptly investigated by United Nations officers who termed it an amateurish "frameup." Some 18 hours after a North Korean liaison officer told UN officers during a weird pre-dawn meeting under a pelting rain at Kaesong that the talks were "off from now on," radio Peiping aired the different version.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Washington began to display doubt over being able to end the Japanese peace conference on Sept. 8, as scheduled, and moved to hold night sessions if needed. Japan has applied for membership in the World Bank.

The Tehran oil talks collapsed after Iran had rejected the British proposals and her counter-proposals were deemed unsatisfactory. Two Senate committees voted to cut the $8,500,000,000 foreign aid program by the amount of the House figure, $1,001,250,000, but apportioned the reductions differently between military and economic help.

Another Senate committee decided to reconsider its proposed schedule of income tax increases to ease the blow on the $5,000-to-$15,000 bracket.

Price officials "tentatively" decided with industry on adjustments that will mean an average retail increase of 1 to 2 cents a pound for beef cuts in the fall. A Wage Stabilization Board panel was unable to agree on what to do about wage increases in industries not under price control.

Government, industry and university experts met to work out a long-range solution of the manpower problem.

U. S. STEEL FIRM AWARDS CONTRACT, NEW POWER PLANT

New York Firm to Engineer, Design 60,000 Kilowatt Station

ALSO GAS MAINS

Main Power House To Be 108 Feet High; To Use Blast Furnace Gas

(Special to Courier)

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 23—United States Steel Company has awarded to Gibbs & Hill, Inc. of New York, N. Y., a contract for the engineering, design, and construction of a 60,000 kilowatt electric power station for the Fairless Works of the company, now under construction in Falls Township it was announced today.

In addition to the power station, the New York engineering firm will undertake the engineering and design of mains to bring blast furnace gas to the power station as a fuel and of an underground 13.8 kilovolt electrical system. They will collaborate with the equipment manufacturer in the engineering and design of four electric substations and a system of supervisory and telemetering controls.

Fresh and cleaned water for the power station boilers and water returned to the Delaware river from the station will flow at different levels through a concrete duct 17 feet high and 14½ feet wide with walls 18 inches thick, extending approximately 3,000 feet from a river-side pump house.

The main power house will be 108 feet high and cover an area 233 feet by 224 feet, with a stack 146 feet above yard level. The outside walls of the power station will be of corrugated galvanized sheets, in keeping with other buildings of Fairless Works. Main equipment of the power station will comprise

BUCKS CIVIC AND INDUSTRIAL LEADERS TAKE NEW STEPS TO FORCE GOV'T TO DECLARE LOWER SECTION CRITICAL DEFENSE AREA

By International News Service

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23—Bucks County civic and industrial leaders are taking new steps today to force the Federal Government to declare the lower section of the county a critical defense area.

About 25 local government officials and prominent businessmen met in Philadelphia yesterday with William J. Levitt, mass home builder, who promised to provide housing for 26,000 new families in the area "come hell or high water."

Levitt told the group that the lower part of the county will see "the largest industrial development east of Pittsburgh" when the new United States Steel plant in Falls Township is built, and other companies follow suit in locating manufacturing facilities at nearby points.

All agreed that housing would be the chief problem, and that declaration of the district as a critical area must come soon to prevent the growth of slum "mushroom cities," of trailer camps and hastily constructed, unplanned housing.

"We want to add a little bit of the luxury that comes from planning," said Levitt. "You can't legislate housing overnight, and if you try to, the result is cheap 'government housing' that would leave a blight on the whole area."

Burgess I. Johnson Hetherington, Sr., of Bristol, pointed out that trailer camps along the Bristol highway are already a menace to the rest of the community.

"I've seen many of them," he

START WORK ON LANGHORNE OFFICE

Bell 'Phone Co. is Spending Approximately $150,000 On Building

TO BE FINISHED IN 1952

LANGHORNE, Aug. 23—The Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania has started construction work on a major addition to the company's Langhorne central office building, it was announced today.

The new addition, which will cost approximately $150,000, will provide space for more dial switching equipment and for an addition to the toll and long distance switchboards, the company said.

The addition will be two stories high, running 40 feet to the rear of the building and 25 feet to the side. It will be of reinforced concrete construction, with brick masonry, to conform with the rest of the building.

The Townsend and Elfreth Company are the general contractors, with Borie and Smith, the architects.

The company expects the building work to be completed by the beginning of next summer, with installation of the new telephone facilities to follow immediately thereafter. It is expected they will be ready for operation late the same year.

STATE OF THE UNION

A year from now we will be at the commencement of the Presidential campaign. Surely the 1952 elections, in which control of the white House, the entire Federal government, and of both chambers of Congress, are at stake, will be among the most important in all the long history of this country.

Between now and then much must be done. There will be jockeying in both political parties. No matter how far in front key figures appear to be among the Republicans and Democrats, footwork to advance someone else will continue. Later there will be election of delegates, a matter of great political consequence in many states. There will be preferential elections as well. And eventually there will be the conventions, the keynote acceptance speeches, the summer lull—and then the whistle will blow!

Isn't now a good time to take stock of issues, to make an inventory of our national situation, and appraise Uncle Sam's prospects? Consider the basic conditions of this country.

FINANCIAL—"Money isn't everything," but it is the foundation of nearly everything. Are we rich, or are we nearly broke? As a nation, we are vastly over-borrowed. Our economy and our people are vastly over-taxed. Inflation is raging. Much has been said, virtually nothing done, to curb inflation. Misunderstood though the subject is, and harmless though the trends seem at their present stage, inflation is out of hand and constitutes the worst danger in our history.

UNITY—There is none. The Democrats are deeply divided. So are the Republicans. The carefully fomented social divisions of the country, intensified as a political expedient by the New Dealers, have not healed. During

Dorfner Plans To Have His Burned Boat Raised

MORRISVILLE, Aug. 23—A local man who sustained slight injuries when his boat exploded and burned at Barneget, N. J., on Monday, plans to have the craft raised. The boat of George Dorfner has been resting on the bottom of Cedar Creek since the explosion.

Dorfner, who had been fishing from the 28-foot cabin cruiser alone, when the blast occurred, leaped overboard. He was rescued by John Genz, a state police detective attached to New Brunswick, N. J., station. The cruiser burned to the water line.

After the craft is raised, Dorfner plans to do some fishing until his vacation ends.

WORK TO START SOON ON NEW LIQUOR STORE

Modern Structure on Market Street Also to House Two Other Business Places

COMPLETED 7 MONTHS

Work will start during the next month, according to Penn Realty Company, on a new business structure on Market street, near Radcliffe street.

A modern, one-story building will provide new quarters for the State Liquor Store, now located on Mill street; and will also include two other business quarters.

The tract was sold some time ago to Samuel Rosen, of Bristol. It is expected that the building will be completed by April.

The structure will be of brick and cinder block and it will be the first structure for retail purposes on Market street. It may be the initial step of Bristol's retail center, expanding from Mill street into another area.

TO ADDRESS GRANGE

WOODSIDE, Aug. 23—J. J. Appleyard, a representative of the Fairless Plant at Morrisville, will be guest speaker before the Edgewood Grange in Woodside community house on Aug. 28th at eight p. m. He will present the film, "Steel—Man's Friend." Wayne Ely, master of the grange, will preside. Mrs. Joseph Hollowell, Mrs. James Frank and Mrs. William DeCou are members of the hospitality committee.

John Wanamaker originated the saying, "The customer is always right."

Cook, the defendant, and Crosby, went to a cafe, where Cook left Crosby after telling him that he wanted to "give David a good scare." Cook went to the Seaboard Container plant, getting there about 10:30 and after talking with David, shot him.

David, who said: "Get me a doctor, I'm hurt," was shot near the lower rib, on the right side, with the bullet lodging near his spine.

Cook returned to the cafe and when Crosby, who was still there, heard the sirens of the police asked Cook "Are they looking for you?"

Cook, who later ran into some relatives of his victim, reported to the Bristol Police Department, where he surrendered himself.

He was arrested with assault and battery with intent to kill. His case was not heard pending the outcome of David's injuries.

District Attorney Curtin said David was never able to appear in criminal court and that he died July 21, in Jefferson Hospital, Phila. Immediately, Cook was arrested and charged with murder.

The murder trial will probably be heard in the December term since the murder trial of Walter John Lowry will be held in September some time.

Roast Frankfurters At 8 'n' 40 Supper Meeting

PENNDLE, Aug. 23—After roasting frankfurters and enjoying a supper on the lawn, last evening, members of Bucks County Salon, No. 74, 8 'n' 40 Societe, went in-doors at the home of Mrs. Frank Buckley, here, for a business meeting.

The presiding officer, Mrs. James Tracy, Hulmeville, reported on the state convention of the societe, held at Pittsburgh recently. Mrs. Fred Baingo, Langhorne Manor, welfare chairman, read a letter of thanks from a hospital patient, who had been remembered with a gift.

"Pollyanna" gifts were exchanged.

In September members will assemble at the residence of Mrs. Walter Strouse, Tullytown.

TURKEYS IN SEASON

It is one of the oldest of American customs to eat turkey at Thanksgiving time. There is no good reason, however, for not eating it the year round. It is not necessary to wait for a month with an R in it. And Americans are gradually waking up to this fact, according to the turkey growers.

Where only 10 per cent of Americans 15 years ago ever ate turkey except at Thanksgiving or Christmas, about 35 per cent do so now. The idea is catching on. But Americans eat only 5.3 pounds per capita of turkey in a year. That is three times what it was in 1930, but it's small compared to the 146 pounds of red meat they eat.

The turkey business figures to do a lot of expanding. Prices are more reasonable than formerly, especially in comparison with beef. Turkey and beef on the hoof now cost the same. In 1930 turkey cost more than twice as much.

One reason people formerly bought turkeys only for holiday feasts was that they were so hard to get rid of. The man who has been through the routine of turkey hot, turkey warmed over, turkey cold, turkey hash and turkey soup after Thanksgiving and again after Christmas can hardly be blamed if it takes him 10 months to work up a yen for turkey again.

But the turkey growers are doing something about that. For one thing, they have developed pygmy turkeys about half the usual size—no larger than a big roasting chicken. And they are teaching butchers how to cut and sell cut-up turkey. When a bird weighs as much as a lamb, why make people buy them whole? Nobody asks the customers to buy a whole lamb.

Other concessions to the consumer are helping to popularize America's traditional fowl. Boneless frozen fillets are beginning to go on the market. Pin-feathers are being removed by a more efficient process. Transparent plastic packaging adds to attractiveness.

If this sort of thing keeps on, the industry may be surprised at the results. It is remarkable what can be done by regarding the consumer's convenience and preferences seriously.

"A" FOR EFFORT

The 10 Senators who have introduced a resolution calling for world disarmament are engaged in a futile performance. What's more, they admit it. They say quite frankly that they have no immediate hope that Russia will go along with the program.

Time after time the Soviet Union has indicated that it will accept no disarmament plan which does not leave it in a better position than any other nation. It has refused to entertain the thought of submitting its military situation to an inspection by outsiders.

While the Senators' objective is entirely desirable, the best that can be done, therefore, is to give the 10 "A" for effort.

two 30,000 kilowatt turbo-generators; three 110,000 cubic feet a minute turboblowers; and three 300,000 pounds per hour, 885-pound pressure, steam generators. The new power plant will use blast furnace gas, a by-product of pig iron manufacture, as a primary fuel to effect maximum economies in operation and to conserve other natural fuels in producing electric power. Excavations for the initial power installations were begun on May 1.

Major installations will include two turbo-generators for 60-cycle current, three turbo-blowers, three boilers, and a building to house the equipment. Auxiliary equipment will include the necessary pumps, compressors, condensers, fans, de-aerators, water-treatment plant, controls and instrumentation, and electric substations.

The turbo-generators, operating at 3,600 revolutions a minute at 850 pounds pressure and 900 degrees Fahrenheit, will each generate 30,000 kilowatts at 13,800 volts. They will be equipped with two 25,000-square-foot condensers, each of which will be provided with one motor-driven and one turbine-driven condensate pump. The pumps will be 2-stage, center-suction types.

Cooling water for each condenser will be provided by two horizontal, single stage, double-suction volute centrifugal motor-driven pumps with 24-inch suction and 24-inch discharge openings. Each pump will have a rated capacity of 13,000 gallons a minute.

There will be five 69,000-volt electric substations: a main substation in the sheet and tin mill area, and one each at Biles Island, the hot strip mill, the power house, and the pump house. Each will be equipped with power transformers, switchgear, supervisory control and telemetering equipment. The substations will have power transformers as follows: Biles Island—two 50,000 kilovolt-amperes; main—two 33,000 kilovolt-amperes; hot strip—two 33,000 kilovolt-amperes; pump house—two 4,687 kilovolt—amperes; and power house—two 33,000 kilovolt-amperes.

In the power house auxiliary power will be supplied through two auxiliary power transformers and suitable switchgear. Generator excitation will be regulated by rotating-type regulators and a safety exciter will be provided capable of furnishing excitation to either generator. There will be six motor control centers and three valve control centers.

The three boilers will be equipped with automatic feedwater control, superheat control and combustion control suitable for firing with blast furnace gas, coke-oven gas, natural gas or fuel oil either alone or in combination. They will have water-cooled hopper bottoms arranged for a future pneumatic ash removal system if pulverized coal is required as an auxiliary fuel.

These steam generating units will each produce 300,000 pounds of steam an hour at 885 pounds a square inch and 900 degrees Fahrenheit total steam temperature at the superheater outlet. A pressure-reducing and desuperheating station capable of handling the necessary quantities of auxiliary steam will be located in the power house.

Each boiler will be equipped with one forced-draft fan and two induced-draft fans. Each forced-draft fan will handle 451,000 pounds of air an hour at 100 degrees Fahrenheit and 17.9 inches water gage. Each induced-draft fan will handle 461,400 pounds of gas an hour at 620 degrees Fahrenheit and 18.6 inches water gage.

Water will be obtained from the Delaware River. Clarification and reduction of silica will be accomplished by the use of ferric sulphate and lime in two rapid-flow treatment tanks operating in parallel. Effluent from the tanks will go to four gravity filters operating in parallel. Filtered water will be stored in a 150,000-gallon clearwell. From here it will be drawn to four parallel, gravity, zeolite-type softeners using styrene resin as the ion exchange material. Softened water will be stored in a 75,000-gallon soft-water clearwell. The plant is designed to treat 1,200 gallons a minute.

There will be five boiler feed pumps with provision for another when a fourth boiler is installed. Each pump will have a design capacity of 333,000 pounds an hour or 700 gallons a minute. They will be centrifugal multi-stage, double-cased barrel types. Three will be turbine-driven and two dual-driven. For simplicity of operation, stage feedwater heaters have been eliminated from the design. There will be two de-aerating heaters, each with a capacity of 700,000 pounds an hour and a normal operating pressure of 24.7 pounds per square inch absolute. One heater will handle feedwater to two boilers.

Condenser discharge water will be recirculated to the plant service water system by two 35,000,000-gallon a day centrifugal, gear-turbine driven pumps operating against a suction lift of 15 feet and a discharge pressure of 63 pounds a square inch. This is equal to a total dynamic head of 160 feet.

The three horizontal turbo-blowers will each have a rated capacity of 110,000 cubic feet a minute of standard air at 35 pounds pressure. They will be driven by horizontal, multi-stage steam turbines capable

Seven Days of Good Grooming

Courtesy Hughes Brushes

As part of your "beauty week" program, survey all good grooming equipment. If your hair brush looks beat, buy a new one.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WANT to have fun? Want to look better than you ever have in all your life? Then give yourself seven days of concentrated self-care. There are all kinds of "weeks." Why not a beauty week? Not that we would expect you to put in full time these busy days, but just attend to some duties that you have neglected.

Cut down on your social activities. Get to bed early. Everyone should catch up on sleep now and then. Nothing like sleep to keep your mental and physical motors clicking along normally. The whole human machine is re-energized, inwardly and outwardly. The appearance of fatigue vanishes into thin air.

Beauticians Lament

Take a survey of your pulchritude equipment. If your hair brush looks all tired out, blow yourself to a new one and use it. Beauticians lament over the fact that women depend too entirely upon professional services for hair health, sidestep home care.

With the idea of giving your digestive motors a rest, possibly nipping an inch or so off the waistline, eat simple, nourishing food. Start the day with a full glass of orange juice; it is good for your complexion. Once a day have a green salad. Put a quart of buttermilk on your daily menu.

A Thorough Job

Instead of giving your complexion a thirty-seconds' going over with cream at night, make a more thorough job of it. Spend at least ten minutes by the clock in laying on the fragrant emollient. Do light little circles with your fingertips over the entire facial area. Include your neck.

Your fingernails, except for the professional manicure, probably haven't had any special care. Friction them with cuticle cream. Rub a heavy cream into your knuckles. Cup one elbow in a creamed palm and turn it this way and that until the cream has been absorbed by the flesh. Then treat the other elbow. Get in a little good reading. That's always a good idea.

wink in the pitch blackness of empty space.

A cargo hatch opens and the crew, clad in pressurized, oxygenated, radiation-proof "space suits," clambers out onto the rocket's hull.

The rocket is zooming tirelessly on its orbit around the earth, which looks like a gigantic moon filling half the "sky." But even at seven miles a second, there is no sensation of speed, no rush of wind—because there is no air.

Nor is there any sensation of weight, for the rocket's circular acceleration around its orbit balances exactly the gravitational pull of the earth. Crew members must anchor themselves to their craft—a rope will do the trick—lest they float away.

From the cargo hatch they might pull huge, prefabricated lengths of collapsible, radiation-proof plastic, to be assembled into a doughnut-shaped ring braced by plastic spokes.

And then the structure could be inflated—like an automobile tire—from the rocket's air tanks to create man's first space station.

This is on comic-strip fantasy. Rough plans for this space station, by one of the world's foremost rocket experts, already are on paper.

And the scientist, Dr. Werner von Braun, asserts he has the mathematical proof—hundreds of complex equations—that rocket flights across man's last frontier into space are at least theoretically possible.

In a symposium on "Space Medicine," published by the University of Illinois Press, Dr. von Braun presents his conception of such a space platform. It looks like a giant bicycle wheel lying on its side.

At the hub is a steam boiler and electrical generating unit. Mounted nearby is a huge mirror to focus the sun's rays on the boiler.

In the hollow, pressurized rim are the crew's quarters. Because there is no earthly gravity, the platform would revolve around its hub to provide "synthetic gravity"—centrifugal acceleration. It's the same force that keeps water in a bucket when you swing it rapidly. Since there is no friction, the platform will have the same velocity as the rockets that carried it up—about seven miles a second—and it will follow the same orbit around the earth.

And Dr. von Braun says the orbit could be chosen so that the platform circles the earth between the Arctic and Antarctic icecaps. At the same time, of course, the earth revolves eastward on its axis.

That means the space station can "strategically" cover all inhabited regions on earth during one 24-hour cycle." And Dr. von Braun explains that a rocket missile could be fired from the station and guided by remote control to any spot on the map.

The missile could be an atom bomb.

The German scientist comments: "Our space station could be utilized as a very effective bomb carrier, and for all present-day means of defense, a non-interceptible one. . . . It appears to me that in the atomic age the nation which first owns such a bomb-dropping space station might be in a position virtually to control the earth. "The political situation being what it is, with the earth divided into a western and an eastern camp, I am convinced that such a station will be the inevitable result of the present race of armaments."

But "Space Medicine" adds that a space platform might have other, happier uses. Dr. von Braun explains:

"A person observing the earth from up there would have a unique view of cloud formations on earth, particularly above the oceans. This offers novel possibilities for weather forecasting. By using high-powered telescopes, you may observe ships crossing the oceans and . . . have flash iceberg warnings. . . .

"And believe it or not, magnification factors could be used that would enable you to see people moving around on the earth's surface! This is because atmospheric disturbances, when looking from outer space through the earth's atmosphere, are much less serious than those affecting astronomical observations from telescopes mounted on the bottom of the atmospheric shell."

Telescopes focused from the space station on the other planets, or on the outer reaches of the universe, will reveal more than any earthbound observatory.

The station might also be used as a worldwide television relay station, or a laboratory for experiments that could never be performed in the earth's gravitational field. And if the space platform is stocked with extra supplies of rocket fuel, Dr. von Braun says, rockets could reload and take off for trips to the moon and "interplanetary voyages will not be too far away."

Although everything possible is done for the safety of the bathers, and to keep the beach and lake clean during the afternoon hours, the guards state they find that have been wrought during each night. "There are often as high as 35 beer bottles and a few soda water bottles littering the beach when we arrive each day," they complain. Not only these, but paper, garbage, and general rubbish are cleared away by the guards before the bathers arrive.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Walter Klerman
(Distributed by International News Service)

Those who have been on vacation will find things little changed. . . . Prices, including that of peace, are a bit higher and public morals are a bit lower.

My barber and I had a very pleasant vacation. . . . We caught several fish, lazed around with the newspapers and listened to that Washington program "Go For Broke."

We heard most of the Administration's request for more money but there was one day power was off for three hours and we missed three of the broadcasts. . . . that put us 97 billion dollars behind on our tally sheet.

Turned out that Paraguay hasn't asked for anything recently so the Government is sending a man down there from our loan department to see what kind of money they can use.

At the moment we conduct the only free finance company which sends agents out in the field looking for potential clients who have neglected to come and take it away.

The most shocking thing we heard about was the West Point story. . . . My barber said he was disappointed because "after all, these fellows were training for a career as officers and gentlemen, not politicians."

REMOVE ALL MILDEW STAINS IN ORDER TO PRESERVE FABRICS

By Frances Vannoy
(Home Economics Extension Representative)

Mildew will weaken or rot material unless it's removed promptly. You can remove surface growth of mold with a thorough brushing outdoors. Outdoor brushing is suggested so spores won't be scattered in the house where they may start a new growth.

The type of material will determine the kind of treatment used to remove mildew stains. With fabrics that can be laundered, wash the fresh mildew stain with soap and water. For more persistent stains, moisten with lemon juice and salt. Dry in the sun, rinse thoroughly, and dry again. Use this treatment on colored garments with care.

You can treat old mildew stains on cotton, linen, and rayon with a chlorine bleach. Dip fabric in the bleach for one minute, then into a weak solution of vinegar—two tablespoons vinegar to one cup of water—to stop the chlorine action. Rinse well and dry.

A thick suds of a mild neutral soap or saddle soap will remove mildew on leather goods. After sponging, wipe with a damp cloth and dry in a well-ventilated area. If mildew seems to have penetrated pores of the leather, wipe the article with a cloth wrung from a weak solution of alcohol—one cup denatured alcohol to one cup water. Dry in the air.

Remove mildew from floors and woodwork with a cloth dipped in a solution of kerosene and water. If this isn't effective, wash in warm water and soap. Allow wood to dry thoroughly.

Bucks Civic and Industrial Leaders Take New Steps

he told the group. "We have no labor trouble of any kind."

"But more people are going to come in from outside, and with no planning or forethought, it will become a blighted area. We are in this section to stay, and we want to see a community where our employees are homeowners."

"At Kaiser, our chief worry is this: after the war-buying program is over, are we going to have a happy family of workers, or are we going to have slums?"

"The big reason we have low production costs is that our employees are happy homeowners. We want to keep it that way, even after we get our expansion program underway."

Wallace G. Murfit, chairman of the Bucks County Division of the Greater Philadelphia-South Jersey Council, interjected that "there are many spots in the county where residents will resent any intrusion by outsiders."

He added that "We want these people to become a part of Bucks County. There has to be some planning in a tremendous development such as this one is going to be, and the people who come in, and who bring new citizens in, must show that they will integrate themselves with the rest of the county."

Levitt explained: "I think this is going to be the most perfectly planned community on earth. No house will face on a through street. There will be a minimum lot size of 7,000 sq. ft."

"Levittown, Pa., will be a complete city with all types of homes. It will have swimming pools, a town hall, and a 'main drag' shopping and community center with plenty of parking space."

He added that the company has complete more than half the planning for the town. Water supply problems, he said, are "almost licked" and a "mammoth" sewage disposal plant is already designed.

According to the plans, utility work, including the building of streets, sewers, a community water system, and a storm drainage system, will be started in the first part of October. Occupancy will begin, he said, about May 1, 1952.

President Charles Hunter of the Hunter Manufacturing Co. in Bristol, asserted that "The growth of the community rests upon planners like Mr. Levitt."

He added, however, that "if you get this community to be declared critical, small manufacturers will be squeezed out of materials." Levitt answered that critical designation would last only a matter of months.

"You must call on your congressmen and local authorities to force the issue of this declaration," Levitt urged. "This place must not 'grow like Topsy.'"

Levitt charged that without the planning of a private builder, the unregulated building of homes for workers would bring about multi-family housing, which he termed an "artificial creation."

"Every man wants his own little bit of ground," he added.

The builder explained that, although it can be expected that his development will be the largest single program in the area, it would not be the only one. If the pattern in Bucks County follows that of other industrial centers in World War II, he predicted, there would be as many as 40 different builders in the district.

"We've already been working for four months on the planning of this town," he went on. "Right now, we have to become speculators, because no declaration of 'critical' has been applied."

"When it becomes a defense area, though, we will have no merchandising problems. Better credit is offered to a critical area. Materials will be provided for builders only if the section is classified as critical."

"Our Norfolk, Virginia, development was and is an incipient slum," he pointed out, as an example of a case where the government forced 'over-rapid development, without opportunity for planning."

"We don't want a repetition of that."

The houses included in the Levitt "Master Plan" now under consideration fall into three cost groups. The cheapest homes will cost about $9,000, and a relatively small number of the units will come under that heading.

A large majority of the houses will cost about $10,000, and will be intended for nearly all the workers who buy in the development.

The third group, a very small number of the homes, will be what Levitt called the "country club section," and will comprise units in the $15,000 to $25,000 price range.

For the $10,000 homes, financial terms for non-veterans will be a $1500 down payment, and monthly payments of $50 to $54. For veterans, the down payment is $600, with monthly charges of $56 to $60.

These terms, Levitt pointed out, include everything: landscaping, kitchen range, washing machine, built-in television set, carpet, taxes, and other costs.

Among the other leaders present at the meeting were Francis Pitkin, executive director of the Pennsylvania Planning Board and chairman of the Interstate Commission for the Delaware River Basin; and Herman Margerum, head of Morrisville Planning Commission; Clyde Waterman, Bristol Chamber of Commerce; Charles Roberts, Esq., Newtown; and Dr. Charles H. Boehm, Supt. of Bucks County Schools.

"Finian's Rainbow" To Be At "Circus" for Two Weeks

LAMBERTVILLE, Aug. 23—"Finian's Rainbow," Yip Harburg and Fred Saddy's great musical about Glocca-Moora, Leprachans, Rainbow Valley and that "Old Devil Moon" will open at St. John Terrell's Music Circus, here, on August 28 for two week's engagement. "Finian's Rainbow" is considered by many to have one of the most significant books combined with some of the greatest music and lyrics ever written.

Starring in this amusing Irish musical comedy will be many of the performers who have been appearing in "Finian's Rainbow" for some years now. They include Marilyn Day, Harry Stockwell, Dorothy Tucker, P. J. Kelly, Delores Martin, Eddie Bruce and Robert Pitkin, and they will be assisted by William Shriver and Rowan Tudor of the resident company. The production will be staged by Robert C. Jarvis with Oscar Kosaric leading the orchestra, Sherman Frank supervising the chorus, Kenneth Mackenzie directing the ballet and Charles Evans doing the decor.

Marilyn Day played the role of Sharon in the touring company of "Finian's" and recently appeared in "Kiss Me Kate" on Broadway. Just last week she played the title role in "Miss Liberty" at the Dallas State Fair. Harry Stockwell played Woody alongside Miss Day in the road company of "Finian's." He was the original Curly in the National company of "Oklahoma" and afterwards played the role for a year on Broadway.

Kindness and Humility:

In human relationships, man is wont to look for courtesy and kindness. What man expects to find in others, he must first manifest to others. An examination of conscience is frequently beneficial to the soul and to better human relationships. "Do I hate anyone? If I do, why?" It could be vanity — self pity or selfishness. "Do I become angry and call my friends, yes even my beloved ones, harsh names? Do I act like a spoiled child by not speaking to them? If I do, why? It could be pride — lack of self control. Life upon this earth is what we make it. It is a divine command "To love thy neighbor as thyself." God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son. John Loder Held Over As Star of Next Play

NEW HOPE, Aug. 23—John Loder, who so brilliantly portrays the leading role in "Second Threshold," at the Bucks County Playhouse this week, will be held over as the masculine star of "When Ladies Meet," the sophisticated and merry comedy by Rachel Crothers which opens a week's engagement at Theron Bamberger's theatre in New Hope, Pa., on Monday, August 27th, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

"When Ladies Meet" not only has Mr. Loder as its male star, but it will also present three feminine stars, Frances Reid, Sara Seegar and Ruth White, all of whom are well known on Broadway and are favorites of New Hope audiences. It is a sophisticated comedy with worldly wisdom, witty dialogue and dramatic situations about a young authoress who becomes infatuated with her publisher, and Frances Reid plays the fascinating young writer, and Mr. Loder of course is the publisher. Critics have called "When Ladies Meet," the best play of Miss Crothers' distinguished writing career. John Mason Brown said "It is trim, well planned and happily executed, rich in humor and warm in sympathy."

ART WORK TO BE PUT ON AUCTION BLOCK*Ezra Stone to Serve As The Auctioneer at New Hope
Function*FOR VOTERS' LEAGUE

NEW HOPE, Aug. 23—With actor Ezra Stone of Newtown serving as auctioneer, 49 paintings, pieces of sculpture and original manuscripts will go under the hammer on Sunday, August 26th. This sale of contemporary art are now on display at the Towpath House, Mechanic street.

Benefitting mutually from the auction will be the artists and the League of Women Voters. The latter group sponsors the auction. The artists will get 40 per cent of the money raised, a precedent-setting step in this town where for decades artists have shown their interest in civic affairs by donating the works which are their bread and butter.

The exhibit is a good cross-section of the work now being produced in this area. Paintings range from representational works by John Folinsbee, John Sharp and Randolph Bye—among others—to an abstract by Louis Stone and a non-objective painting by Lloyd R. Ney. Among the sculptors whose works will be sold are Selma Burke, Harry Rosin and Dorothy Naumberg. The three literary works on display are original manuscripts of well-known works. James A. Michener is offering "The Hero," one of the famous "Tales of the South Pacific." Bud Schulberg offers the manuscript of a short story, "What Makes Manny Run?" which he later expanded to the best-seller, "What Makes Sammy Run?" And playwright Samuel Raphaelson of Spring Valley offers the manuscript of "Hilda Crane," which played on Broadway last year.

Raphaelson has appended a note to his manuscript on exhibit. "The enclosed is the authentic first draft of 'Hilda Crane,'" he writes. "It has the added auction virtue that it is totally different from the play as produced and published. The plot is different, the characters, the dialogue."

FLEETWING ESTATES

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Phillips and children, Herbert, Jr., and David, returned Aug. 15th from a 10-day trip to St. Petersburg, Fla., with Mrs. Phillips' mother, Mrs. Walter Rice, Croydon. Mrs. George LaRue was called to the telephone, August 15th, after returning from a dinner at her mother's home. Hurrying to the home of Mrs. William Keyser to receive the call, Mrs. LaRue burst in on a crowd of friends who had gathered to give her a surprise shower. Hostesses Mrs. William

Keyser and Mrs. Leo Davidson entertained the following guests: Mrs. Louis Watty, Mrs. Robert Hanson, Mrs. Louis Chambers, Mrs. Peter Marrozz, Mrs. I. J. LAMBERTVILLE FLAT
WARE MUCH IN DEMAND

350 of The Residents Make 20,000 Pieces in A
Single Day

PROCESS IS EXPLAINED

LAMBERTVILLE, N. J., Aug. 23.—The manner in which 350 people in this small community are revolutionizing America's eating utensils is told in the July issue of "Steelways."

This group each day turns out at least 20,000 stainless steel knives, forks and spoons—of a type claimed to have "the color and lustre of fine silverware."

"Until a few years ago" the story is told "the tableware was cut from a flat piece of steel, pounded into shape and polished. It was simple to make, but the steel was the same thickness from bowl to handle, and consequently badly off balance and distinctly unbeautiful.

"The new stainless flatware is a tough, balanced and untarnishable product, but getting it from strip to the state in which it can cope gracefully with a bowl of lentil soup has turned plant engineers gray.

"To conquer the problem Diamond Silversmiths Ltd., a division of Ekco Products Company, Lambertville, has worked out a process that includes some 35 stamping, buffing and polishing operations (most of them done by hand) to make a single teaspoon.

"The making of a spoon begins with the arrival of coils and sheets of stainless steel strip, which are fed into a blanking machine, a kind of automatic guillotine that thuds down monotonously to cut out rough approximations of a spoon shape. These last, called keys, drop into a box and are carted off to be 'graded' the process that is primarily responsible for stainless' new place on the dinner table.

"Grading to a tableware man is what a steel producer would call rolling. The keys come in a box to a girl in front of a machine about the size of an ordinary grinding machine. She feeds each end of them into small rolls which thin what is to be the bowl and the handle so the spoon will be balanced.

"Next the graded key moves to the other blanking machine which chops an accurate outline of the spoon from the key. In the case of a fork two more blankings make the tines, and a fourth does the final trimming. A tableware plant is not a good place for conversation. Every way you turn, dies are thundering down to cut cold steel, and the general result is something like the sound of a large anti-aircraft battery.

"The brunt of all this hammering is borne by steel dies made by Diamond's own craftsmen. Each will stand up under 15,000 or more jolting blows.

"At this stage the spoon is at last recognizable to the lay eye, although it is dull in color and quite flat. The next step is a preliminary buffing to bring out some of the natural lustre of the metal. Banks of spoons are buffed on wheels that look like fuzzy rolling pins.

Set on racks the size of a newspaper page the spoons are then ready for a ride on a merry-go-round. The racks go around an oblong track inside a washing tank and come out clean, dry and ready for their last pummeling.

"One by one the spoons are bowl-rolled on a big press by a heavy blow from a die, then the handle is struck by another die to give it a pattern. The forks follow a similar path, and then both spoons and forks move on to final hand finishing.

"Steel knives have a somewhat different history. In the first place they are made from three-eighth inch rods, not strip. In the second, they are made of a higher carbon stainless steel which enables them to take and hold a cutting edge. Spoons and forks are made of different grades of stainless which contain relatively little carbon and a good deal of chromium.

"Cut into short lengths the rod is heated red hot, then swung onto a drop forge which crashes down to form the handle and rough out the blade. After cooling the knife is trimmed by a die to its familiar shape and dumped with the other rough knives into a barrel which contains an abrasive suspended in a liquid medium. As the barrel is agitated the knives are tumbled in the abrasive until they are smooth.

"Ground individually by hand, then by machine, the blanks are mirror finished and stamped with a pattern by a head rattling blow from a die. One at a time they are ground to a fine edge on a wheel, buffed to gleaming on another wheel and at last sent to join their companions in the packing room.

"The forks and spoons get approximately the same hand finishing. The backs will be buffed by one man, the bowls by another, the handles by still another, until the finish is perfect."

SEE UNEMPLOYMENT IN DOYLESTOWN AREA

Believe Over-Production
And Price Drop Are Two Of The Reasons

MARKET IS FLOODED

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 23—A general readjustment, over-production, price drops and a market flooded with goods are given as some of the causes of unemployment in this area.

William F. Fretz & Son plants, manufacturers of men's trousers, and one of the oldest plants in the area, are undergoing a seasonal change and are operating about 60 per cent capacity with one plant closed for the time being.

Market changes are taking place in the wool market in general, as prices continue to tumble to a range that can be met by the average worker.

Doylestown's largest manufacturing plant, the Prudential Mills, are working five days a week, two shifts, and there are no instances of unemployment in that plant at the present time, although the market is off approximately 35 per cent, an officer of the company said this morning.

"There is plenty of unemployment throughout the country, however," the Prudential Mills official pointed out. "Right here in Doylestown last week the line was a long one in front of the unemployment office."

The Bucks Hosiery Finishers, Inc., plant, owned by Louis Jaffe, is working full capacity at their headquarters, Broad and Doyle streets, but the hosiery business in general throughout the country, Jaffe told a reporter, "is in a sad state."

"We have been lucky with our contracts and have work sufficient to carry on at capacity for at least eight months more," Jaffe said. "What we need is more experienced help."

Jaffe said that over-production has caused the mess in which the hosiery industry finds itself. Nearly twice as much hosiery is made annually as is used, he said.

Other local plants are experiencing a let-down to some extent, except where government orders are being turned out. The rubber plant of MacEwan & Smith, Inc., Wood and Franklin streets, is working day and night with no signs of a let-down.

A great many of those who are on the local unemployment list have gone to the Morrisville, Falls township and Bristol areas, have found jobs, but are not satisfied with transportation facilities and the long round trip daily. In the Bristol, Falls township and Morrisville areas, the opposite extreme is noticeable.
